

RESTORATION OF THE LATVIAN ETHNOGRAPHIC OPEN-AIR MUSEUM'S PORT WAREHOUSE

The port warehouse of Liepāja (also called the “Swallow warehouse”) has been built in 1697 next to the channel of Liepāja old port. The building is an authentic and characteristic example of a 17th century warehouse, such that were built in Riga, Liepāja and other sea port cities of the Baltic region.

After the project implementation a unique building will be renovated and added to the collection of the Latvian Ethnographic Open-Air Museum, its preservation and exhibition conditions will be improved, and for the first time it will also be available for public with its newly created exhibition.

Project activities:

1. Restoration and conservation of the port warehouse of Liepāja;
2. Adjustment of the port warehouse of Liepāja building to exhibiting conditions;
3. Experience exchange conference for local and foreign experts;
4. Project administration;
5. Publicity.
