INTRODUCTION

Minorities are a traditional part of Latvian society; the right to their own cultural preservation and development is guaranteed by the Latvian state.

Article no. 114 of the Constitution of the Republic of Latvia (Satversme) states that minorities have the right to maintain and develop their language and their ethnic and cultural identity.

The Ministry of Culture aims to promote civic participation of minorities, support their cultural identity, and promote intercultural dialogue.

The ministry carries out this task in collaboration with minority organizations in the implementation of various measures, such as creative camps, cultural ambassador programmes, and youth participation programmes, which have a wider impact at national level.

Minority participation is ensured by regularly organizing cooperation platforms and advisory councils.

STATISTICAL DATA

Nowadays there are more than 150 ethnicities living in Latvia. The largest ethnic groups are Russians, Belarusians, Ukrainians, Poles, Lithuanians, Jews, Roma, Germans and Estonians.

In 1991 the Latvian Republic passed a law guaranteeing the right to cultural autonomy and cultural self-government for all nationalities and ethnic groups.

Preservation of minority uniqueness

Minorities and their cultures are an integral and important part of Latvian society and cultural space. In Latvia all minorities have the right to maintain and develop their language and ethnic and cultural identity; the state supports this.

Each person’s free choice is respected, human rights are respected

In the field of social integration every individual is free to choose how to preserve their own identity. Each choice is voluntary and is respected. The Latvian State is obliged to interact and cooperate with all citizens, regardless of their choice. The state’s responsibility is to consolidate society on the basis of common values, promoting this process by democratic means.

Identities are complementary, not exclusive

Latvia’s national identity, civil society and integration policies underline the principle that identities complement one another, according to which, different identities enrich rather than exclude one another. Minority identities exist and develop alongside Latvian identity. An individual can have multiple identities at the same time (ethnic, Latvian, European, global).

PARTICIPATORY MECHANISMS

Ministry of Culture:

- Advisory Committee of Representatives from Minority Non-Governmental Organizations;
- Advisory Council for Implementation of Roma Integration Policy;
- Advisory Council for the Integration of Third-country Nationals.

In addition to the advisory councils, each year the Ministry of Culture organizes a minority forum, which acts as a broad participation platform for discussing various topical issues and planning further action in minority policy.

Other participatory mechanisms:

- President’s Advisory Council on National Minorities;
- Council for Implementation of the Cooperation Memorandum (Memorandum) between NGOs and the Cabinet of Ministers;
- Advisory Council on Minority Education Affairs.

Education in minority languages is a precondition for maintaining Latvian minority cultural identity and ensure the integration of society. State-funded education is being implemented in seven Latvian minority education programs: Russian, Polish, Jewish, Ukrainian, Estonian, Lithuanian and Belarusian.

The Advisory Committee of Representatives from Minority Non-Governmental Organizations is a consultative body aimed at promoting the participation of non-governmental organizations in the formation of civil society and the development of ethnic policy, minority rights and culture. It was established in 2006 and in 2014 its composition was renewed, including representatives from the Ministry of Culture, the Ministry of Foreign Affairs and candidates from minority non-governmental organizations. The Ministry of Culture in collaboration with the Committee plans and implements measures to support minorities – both for cultural preservation and for capacity building of non-governmental organizations throughout Latvia. As of 2014, the Committee is chaired by the Minister of Culture.

Since 2014, the Ministry of Culture has been bringing together minority, non-governmental-organization and state institution representatives, experts and stakeholders in the annual forum of national minorities, which is traditionally organized in November, marking the International Day for Tolerance.

Forum activities promote co-operation and participation of minority non-governmental organizations in important social processes. The forum’s working groups of experts, national minorities and representatives of state institutions raise issues and seek solutions to problems in such areas as education, cultural preservation, civic participation and others. Forum decisions and solutions are implemented through joint programming of public integration policies for the coming year.

MEASURES SUPPORTED BY THE MINISTRY OF CULTURE

ADVISORY COUNCIL FOR IMPLEMENTATION OF ROMA INTEGRATION POLICY

The Advisory Council for Implementation of Roma Integration Policy was established in 2012 with the aim of promoting the integration policy of Latvian Roma, evaluating its implementation, as well as intensifying civic participation among the Roma community. Council members are representatives from public institutions, local government, education institutions, NGOs working to protect Roma interests, and Roma NGOs and communities; the Council is composed of experts on Roma integration.

In 2014 the Network of regional experts on Roma integration issues was created in order to facilitate the regular exchange of information and experience between local experts on Roma integration and the development of cooperation among the Ministry of Culture, local authorities and Roma communities for more effective integration of the Roma policy.

LATVIAN MINORITY FORUM

Since 2014, the Ministry of Culture has been bringing together minority, non-governmental-organization and state institution representatives, experts and stakeholders in the annual forum of national minorities, which is traditionally organized in November, marking the International Day for Tolerance.

Forum activities promote co-operation and participation of minority non-governmental organizations in important social processes. The forum’s working groups of experts, national minorities and representatives of state institutions raise issues and seek solutions to problems in such areas as education, cultural preservation, civic participation and others. Forum decisions and solutions are implemented through joint programming of public integration policies for the coming year.
The project “European traces in Latvia” (“Euro-pas pēdas Latvijā”) has been organized since 2014. Its aim is to encourage cooperation between children and youth (especially ethnic minorities) in a creative, modern and interactive way and to help identify Latvia as part of the European cultural space, where its historic cultural heritage (art, architecture, music, cuisine, etc.) has left its mark and its presence can still be felt today.

Children and youth who were involved in the project created videos about evidence or traces of European culture in their city and region, as well as participated in erudition competitions about the European Union. In a geocaching race, participants of the project team attracted more than 300 students from various Latvian schools. Using geocaching principles, hiding geocaches and searching for other team geocaches, project participants searched for and marked Europe’s traces in Latvia.

By promoting European cultural values and an appreciation for diversity, the project promotes minority cultures belonging to Latvia and Europe, as well as strengthens minority youth participation in building a democratic society.

LATVIAN CULTURAL AMBASSADORS

The Latvian cultural ambassador programme has been implemented with the support of the Ministry of Culture since 2012 by the Latvian National Cultural Centre. The Latvian cultural ambassador training model is based on two international British Council programmes – “Intercultural Navigators” and “Active Citizens”. The programme has trained Latvian cultural ambassadors in cooperation with the various ethnic communities in relation to ethnic Latvian culture and its interaction with ethnic minority cultures.

Trainees develop knowledge of cultural diversity, identity and social cohesion, which serves as the basis for the establishment and development of various partnerships (Latvians – ethnic minorities), as well as gaining inspiration for further work.

After completing the training programme, cultural ambassadors use their acquired knowledge to organize training for local communities and non-governmental organizations wishing to participate in shaping better living conditions and a favorable environment in their own village, town or region.

LATVIAN INTANGIBLE CULTURAL HERITAGE AWARENESS – SONG AND DANCE FESTIVAL TRADITION

The Song and Dance Festival tradition makes for a favourable environment for human creativity and collective action. The festival does not distinguish between professionals and amateurs, adults and children, Latvians and non-Latvians – everyone participates. Minority representatives at the Latvian Song and Dance Festival are a good model for integration and create confidence that the collective participation of national minorities in the 2013 Latvian Song and XV Dance Festival will be a basis for further cooperation.

The Latvian National Cultural Centre also provides active co-operation with minority groups between Song and Dance Festivals, involving them in the international folklore festival “Baltica”.

After the active participation of minority groups in the 2013 Latvian Song and XIV Dance Festival and the experience gained from preparing it, development of the intangible minority cultural heritage became a topical issue.

With the support of the Ministry of Culture from 2014, the Latvian National Cultural Centre organized minority creative camps, educating heads of Latvian minority artist groups with regard to their capacity for perfecting the quality of their artistic performance in preparation for each Nationwide Latvian Song and Dance Festival.

The creative camps invited Latvian and foreign experts to hold lectures and conduct classes on the similarities and differences between Latvian and minority cultures. Workshops and instructional presentations provide an opportunity to acquire stagecraft in the creative atmosphere of the culture of their heritage and that of Latvian folk traditions.

Named after Ita Kozakeviča, the Latvian Association of National Culture Societies (LANCS) was founded 30 November 1988, during the National Awakening. It brings together cultural societies and associations of more than 20 nationalities living in Latvia. LANCS helps minorities to become more aware of their ethnic roots and learn about their culture, language and traditions. LANCS and its associations often organize art exhibitions, concerts and meetings with cultural representatives. LANCS provides support for various amateur club developments. Each year in November and December LANCS organizes a large-scale minority art festival called “United in diversity”. Since 1990 LANCS’s chairman of the board is Knight of the Order of the Three Stars, well known pianist and artist Dr. art. Raffi Khajanyan, who, since 2014, has been representing LANCS on the Ministry of Culture’s Advisory Committee of Representatives from Minority Non-Governmental Organizations.
In 2009 Latvia joined the Council of Europe campaign “Enough! (Dosta!) Go beyond prejudice, meet the Roma!”, which aims to create a stronger link between Roma and non-Roma, raising awareness and active participation to break obstacles created by stereotypes and prejudices.

Since 2015 a variety of activities has been implemented, with the aim of promoting tolerance in society and a reduction of negative stereotypes against Roma, as well as promotion of Roma culture. For example, in 2015, marking International Roma Day on 8 April, a Roma Cultural Day “Latvian Roma – between the past and the future” took place. During this event there was also an expert discussion “Roma reflected in the Latvian media”, where the results of media monitoring of Roma were presented.

Based on the results of these discussions and the monitoring, a training seminar was held for upcoming journalists on the Latvian Roma community, its socio-economic problems, cultural and historical heritage, as well as intolerance and discrimination directed at it.

Latvian Roma participation in these events is one of the main conditions and benefits. Involved in these events are state and local government authorities, mass media professionals, politicians, researchers, civil society activists and other interested parties.

Implementation of the campaign in Latvia is coordinated and financially supported by the Ministry of Culture. The non-governmental organization “Latvian Centre for Human Rights” is responsible for popularization of the campaign in Latvia.
